Boston Partners' Michael Mullany Quoted in the Financial Times

The Financial Times recently spoke with Boston Partners' Director of Global Markets Research, Michael Mullaney on the state of value investing. The article, "Why investors crave a return to the art of stock-picking," by journalist Richard Henderson, published February 12, 2019, discusses shifting markets and the potential for value strategies to move to the forefront.

FT subscribers may read the full article online here.

Michael Mullaney is the director of global market research for Boston Partners. He rejoined the firm from Fiduciary Trust Company where he was chief investment officer and was previously the director of fixed income with Boston Partners Asset Management. Mr. Mullaney holds a B.S. degree (Cum Laude) in biological sciences from Boston University and an M.B.A. in Finance from Babson College. He has a total of thirty-six years of investment experience.

Important Disclosure Information

The views expressed by Boston Partners' employees reflect those of the author as of the date of the article. Any such views are subject to change at any time based on market and other conditions and Boston Partners disclaims any responsibility to update such views. The information provided does not constitute investment advice and it should not be relied on as such.

Boston Partners Global Investors, Inc. ("Boston Partners"), is an SEC-registered Investment Adviser. Boston Partners is a premier provider of value equity investment products that are firmly rooted in fundamental research and are based on a disciplined investment philosophy and process. In addition to Boston Partners value equity strategies, the Boston Partners brand includes Weiss, Peck & Greer Partners ("WPG Partners") Small & Micro Cap Value strategies. The investment processes of Boston Partners and WPG Partners are separate and independent, enabling clients to fully benefit from each specialist expertise.